Since rediscovering my love for drawing in recent years, I see objects around me in a different way. I love the way shades of light affect the appearance of a simple subject and make it look more interesting, more dramatic, and often more beautiful. Putting a pencil to paper and recreating a realistic image is an exciting and magical process for me, which I try to convey through my work.